Housing Seminar II
The Cultural Landscape of Home
Prof. A. Adams
Fall 2006

Objectives: This graduate reading seminar engages the plan of a 20th-century North American house to study the cultural landscape of home. We move through familiar rooms—kitchens, living rooms, and bedrooms—informed by classic readings in housing research, welcoming opportunities to discuss the methodologies, scope, and subject framing. In the final phase of the course we revisit the authors previously encountered on the house tour, and take a closer, comparative look at their approaches to research.

Meetings: Wednesdays. 9:00-11:00 am. Attendance and full participation are mandatory. Each student should speak at least once in each class meeting. If for any reason you need to miss a class, please inform Prof. Adams and submit an abstract and response to the readings discussed that day.

Office: Room 309, 398-6706, annmarie.adams@mcgill.ca

Readings: Akiko Busch, Geography of Home, available at The Word Bookstore, 469 rue Milton. Course reader is available at the McGill bookstore.

Assignments:

1. The major assignment (50%) of the course is a cultural-landscapes analysis of a specific house in North America that you have visited. Please include the following in your study: typological context (2) historical context (3) description of exterior and interior (4) plan analysis (5) photos and drawings, including credits (6) bibliography of relevant sources (7) acknowledgements. Many of the articles we read in class make ideal models for this assignment.

2. 15-minute oral presentation of your research (10%) during the last three weeks. Students present in alphabetical order.
3. A book review of 750 words (30%) of Jan Jennings' Cheap and Tasteful Dwellings (2005), due Nov. 1, written as if it is for an academic journal.
4. Weekly participation, 10%.
